SCIENCE NOTES Photographs by Wire.

A Berlin correspondent reports a lecture at Munich, delivered before the Electro-Technical association by Frof. Korn, in which the progress made to perfect his apparatus for transmitting photographs over telegraph wires is given. Prof. Korn stated that the problem of telegraphing photographs had been solved in principle. Experiments made by a German professor recently prove that it is possible to transmit a photograph or sleetch six or soven inches square in a period varying from ten to twenty min-

a German professor recently prove that it is possible to transmit a photograph or sketch six or seven inches square in a period varying from ten to twenty minutes. These experiments were carried out on a telegraph line of about 160 miles but it is issuid that precisely the same results would be obtained if the photograph were transmitted by a telegraph line or submarine cable 500 miles in length.

The photograph which has to be transmitted is placed on a transparent glass cylinder, which revolves slowly and at the same time moves from right to left. A ray of light is thrown on this cylinder by means of an electric lamp and lens, and when the ray of light reaches the interfor of the cylinder it is brighter or darker, according to the coloring of that particular part of the photograph through which it passes. Inside the cylinder is some selenium, which transmits the electrical current in proportion to the intensity of the light brought to bear on it. The selenium transmits the current more rapidly in a bright light and less rapidly as the light decreases. The selenium within the cylinder is connected with the wire over which the photograph is to be transmitted.

over which the photograph is to be transmitted.

The receiving station consists of an electrical Nernst lamp placed inside a glass cylinder covered with sensitized paper.
The Nernst lamp burns more or less brightly according to the varying current transmitted by the sclenium at the other end. It thus reproduces the exact shade of the original photograph, provided that the cylinders at such end of the wire revolve at exactly the same speed. When the improvements which are contemplated are introduced it will be possible to transmit a photograph or sketch of half a dozen inches square within five seconds instead of ten to fifteen minutes.

ceases. A phonograph graphophone or gramaphone equipped with a Chinese record invariably attracts a throng, the limits of which indicate the zone of the carrying power of the instrument. Those reproducing the songs of Chinese actresses seem most popular.

Artificial Pumice Stone.

Artificial Pumice Stone.

A German invention by which artificial pumice stone is produced by a mixture of sand and clay is described by a correspondent as follows. Pumice stone as found in nature is, according to its composition, nothing but lava which has received its foamilke porosity through the fact that volcanic stone substance was cooled very rapidly under strong development of gases. Natural pumice stone, which, for industrial purposes, comes almost exclusively from the Island of Lipari, is of little firmness, and for that reason experiments have been made for some time to find an artificial substitute of greater durability. This seems how to have been accomplished through a German invention under which artificial pumice stone is made by mixing sand and clay.

"This artificial pumice stone is made in The second can also be supplied hard or soft. It has a medium grain and is mainly used for stucco and scuiptural work as also for rubbing wood before painting. The third is soft, of fine grain, and is recommended for polishing wood and the The fourth is of medium hardness and fine grain, and gives to wood the right polish before being finished with oil. The fifth is hard and of fine grain and used for pollshing stone, especially lithographic stone. The manner of using is the same as for natural pumice stone. For wood it is first used dry afterwards mixed with stone. The manner of using is the same as for natural pumice stone. For wood it is first used dry, afterwards mixed with oil."

"Will you please let me set my mouse trap in your pantry?"

In vain I tried to assure him that I was not troubled with mice. but he pleaded and persisted: "You see, I might catch just one and then I'd get a nicke!
